Patrol Challenge 4

Dining and Cooking

A well laid out eating shelter provides a focal point for your camp. It needs to be easy to access, hygienic, safe and functional

Your eating shelter should:

- Be large enough for the entire Patrol, their food and gear
- Be erected tightly, so rain water does not pool (in consideration of the quality of the equipment)
- The outside edges of the Shelter are sufficiently high to not cause a hazard to the whole Patrol
- Have all food and Kitchen/Eating gear under cover when stored
- Shelter guy ropes are lined up with one peg per rope OR (if the shelter does not have guys), then sides are lined up straight
- General erection of the shelter is sturdy and will not become a hazard in heavy weather
- Has sufficient lighting that food can be prepared and eaten simultaneously

Your shelter also needs tables and seating for your whole Patrol and:

- Both tables and seats be level and firm. The seating is safe to sit on.
- Table surfaces are in good condition OR tables covered with a clean table covering
- There should be space separate space for preparing food and eating at the same time

The Challenge

1. Set up the family patio like a Camp Kitchen, using the family BBQ, outdoor furniture, picnic set, etc. Include an esky, first aid kit, notice-board (menu, program) all the trimmings normally found under a Straddy dining-shelter.
If your Patio is a bit small, then how about a tarp between 2 trees or posts in the back yard. You may need to improvise bits that aren't readily found around the home.
2. The Patrol could meet online and pick the best individual effort, suggest improvements and finally present the Patrol's selected Camp-Kitchen (or all the individual efforts) to a Troop meeting.
3. The Troop Council will score the effort, 1 point for each dot point covered on the left
